The happiness of the whole family depends greatly on the health and strength of the housewife. If she is weak and worn out, fretful and nervous she cannot be the wise and patient adviser of her children, the congenial companion of her husband, the calm mistress of her many trying household duties that she was when in perfect health.

For such women nothing equals

CHINA AND HAWAII

Referring to the revolution in China the Friend says in part:

"This great movement makes a special appeal to us here in Hawaii. Thousands and tens of thousands of Chinese have here found a home. For decades they have met us at every turn, and may truly be considered a part of our island life. Blessing and privileges in many forms have here come to them and their children till Hawaii, the 'Land of the Fragrant Sandal Wood,' has become dear to them. In turn we have come to honor and respect this sturdy, patient, law-abiding race, who have helped to lay the foundations of our commercial prosperity, and have here perhaps more than at any one point in all the wide world, where they have gone, learned to assimilate and put to practical use, the best principles of Christian civilization. It is a cause for profound gratitude that in this mid-ocean home of ours we have been privileged to do something to aid in the coming of that better day which is dawning upon China. Many have taken from here, on returning to China, inspiration toward higher and better things. Numbers of the young people from our schools are scattered through the colleges and universities of the mainland of America, preparing for a larger service in China.

"Certain of the names figuring prominently in the contest now being waged and as leaders in the forward movement are well known to some in Hawaii. His Excellency Wu Ting Fang, distinguished diplomat, statesman, philosopher, and genial raconteur, has more than once visited Honolulu. Mills School boys of an earlier period will long remember his earnest words spoken to them in their Assembly Hall. Lai Yuen Hung, general in chief of the revolutionary forces, is from the province of Hupeh, but has connections living here.

"Tung Shao Yee, recently connected with the Board of Communication, passed through Honolulu several years since, on a special mission to thank the United States government for the remission of the indemnity award. He is reported as having recently come over to the revolutionary side. He has relatives here in Honolulu.

"Among others who have visited this city have been two princes of the imperial family, uncles of the little Emperor, and a Manchurian viceroy of one of the Central China provinces. "Of far greater and deeper significance, however, to us here in Hawaii, is the name of Sun Yat Sen, whose life has been so closely interwoven with our own. Dr. Sun in early youth was a student at the Iolani College, here in Honolulu, at that time under the charge of Bishop Willis. Later he returned to China, after some time coming again to Hawaii. His earnest determination to be a Christian brought upon him opposition and persecution. Ostracized from home, he came to those who felt it to be a privilege to give him a brotherly welcome. Our present worthy deacons in the Fort Street Chinese church, Messrs. C. K. Ai and Ho Fong, with others, shared their homes with him. Mr. Ho Fong, Mr. W. A. Bowen of our city, and the writer of these lines are glad to remember that they were permitted to aid in securing passage for him to China. Mr. Ai took him out to meet a steamer lying in the offing and the young man, now known all round the world, went on to meet the destiny awaiting him. He was later baptized by Rev. Dr. Hager of the American Board Mission in Hongkong. For some years he studied medicine in Canton with that well-known medical missionary, Dr. Ken of the American Presbyterian Mission, and later in the College of Medicine in Hongkong. In 1892 he obtained his diploma and began his first practice of medicine in Macao. Here he first learned of a political movement being carried on by the 'Young China' party. This organization sought peaceful reform in existing government methods. Later it developed, however, into an anti-dynastic movement. Closely allied with this organization, it became necessary for him, in order to save his life, to leave China. In 1896, here in Honolulu, he remained quietly for a period, going on from this point to San Francisco, and later to England, where he made his home in London with Mr. and Mrs. Cantile, dear friends whom he had known in China, where Mr. Cantile had been his teacher.

"Shortly after his arrival in London he was adversely inveigled into the Chinese Embassy and was forcibly imprisoned for thirteen days in this place. The record of this trying experience is most vividly told by Dr. Sun in the book entitled, 'Kidnaped in London,' which was published in 1907. If one is seeking for an exciting story, here is one more strange than fiction. Imprisoned in a doubly locked and barred room of the Embassy this friend of ours was subjected to the most harrowing experiences. Word was given out that he was a lunatic. English and Chinese servants, attaches of the Embassy, diplomatic representatives of the Chinese government surrounded him with a cordon, which it was impossible for Dr. Sun to break through. The plan was to take him, gagged, to a steamer bound for the Orient, and ship him via Suez to China, where there was no doubt of the fate awaiting him. Detectives later found that passage had been taken by the Embassy for him. Driven almost to despair, seemingly baffled on all sides, he was enabled at last to send a line through an attendant to a faithful English friend in London, who succeeded in bringing the matter to the notice of the British foreign office, when Lord Salisbury demanded the release of Dr. Sun.

"Following this came long, long years of planning and plotting, of sudden appearances in different parts of the world, of arduous, never wavering prosecution of the great propaganda he has so long had in hand. A large sum was offered by the Chinese government for his delivery, dead or alive. The famous Empress Dowager was willing to forgive others, but never this brave opponent of the Manchu dynasty and its retrograde policy. In 1906 Dr. Sun printed for private circulation a statement, which the Springfield Republican has recently characterized as 'a remarkable document.' After a scathing arraignment of the non-progressive and corrupt government, which had rested for centuries as an incubus on China, he describes the growth and development of the revolutionary movement, suggests certain of the ideals which inspire its leaders, and makes in closing an eloquent appeal to Americans, which should not fall unheeded at this present crisis.

"From time to time Dr. Sun has appeared in Honolulu, in the interests of his work, finding many enthusiastic supporters of the revolutionary cause, last about two years ago. He is now a man forty-six years old. His wife and mother lived for some years at Kula, Maui. His son studied for some time at St. Louis College and is now in California."

DR. SUN YAT SEN

Roger S. Green, United States consul general at Hankow, telegraphed that anti-foreign placards are making their appearance in Nanshang, Hu Peh province. The legation has arranged for the transportation of all missionaries from disaffected sections who can reach the railroad, but is not attempting to assist beyond the Yangtze river.

CALLS CHRIST

Himself with twelve other workingmen, and his message, the Sermon on the Mount, was an inflammatory manifesto. In this book I prove it. I prove that Jesus did not preach non-resistance. He was a believer in militant democracy.

"My contention is that Jesus was kidnapped at midnight in the garden by the system, and He was put to death early in the morning, before the wage-earners and common people were awake to assist Him."

TARIFF REPORT

be a mass of statistical information—most of which is not new—concerning cost of production. A great part of this information, it is said, was in the possession of both Democrats and Republicans at the time of the passage of the Democratic tariff bills at the extra session, which the President vetoed.

The subject of tariff reform, say those in a position to know, has not been strengthened or clarified in the slightest degree by the board's deliberations, and there is a widespread conclusion here that the tariff board was not essential and was never intended to fix any rate or any tariff schedule or bill.

Old Guard Put Out. The old guard Republicans in the House, it is predicted, will find a great deal of difficulty in explaining the board's sins of omission. As soon as the report is made public, it is predicted that it will be shown clearly that its contents could have had no possible connection with the President's veto, even if the clauses relating to the cotton and wool schedules had been complete and available when the Democratic bill was passed.

The tariff experts on the board explain their failure to advise specifically on rates by declaring that such action would be a usurpation of the functions of the ways and means committee.
